The Schwedenallee is one of the principal streets of Duisburg, one of the most ancient towns on the Rhine. It is mentioned as far back as A. D. 430, and occupied a prominent place in history during the Middle Ages, changing hands frequently until about 1600 when it was attached to Brandenburg. Its position, thanks partly to a canal, has made it nowadays a prominent commercial centre. In the Schwedenallee is a statue of Bismarck by Professor Reusch, erected 1905.
